To The Executive and Administrative Committees

Dear Friends:

On the eve of Rosh Hashanah 5709, we desire to extend to our co-workers in the American Jewish Congress cordial greetings and best wishes for the New Year.

In one respect the year just ending has been the most hopeful of centuries. It brought fulfillment of the great and sublime hope for the rebirth of the Jewish State. The State of Israel has come to pass because Jews dared to dream it, to toil and battle for it, to sacrifice that it might come at last into being. The founding of the State of Israel has imbued us with a new faith and courage. We, the Jewish people, shall strive for the attainment of justice and equality, and shall battle until the last vestige of injustice to any race or people shall have been obliterated.

In offering to you our heartfelt wishes for the New Year, we express the confidence that you will make it possible for the American Jewish Congress to take its full part in the heroic struggle that lies before us for justice and democracy throughout the world.

Cordially yours,

Stephen S. Wise
